Why new movers are important for your business.

Over 14% of US households move annually. This life event triggers a series of changes in consumers' buying behavior.

Moving is a time for consumers to reevaluate their business relationships. New movers find it easy to sever ties with their cable TV provider, phone and internet provider, bank, and home insurance provider, to name a few.

This tendency to re-examine vendors makes new movers one of the most attractive and compelling pools of new buyers available in the market today.

- » New Movers are 3-times more likely to change professional relationships than existing residents.
- » New Movers change their purchasing habits more than established residents.
- » New Movers are 5-times more likely to become a long-term customer if you reach them first.
- » When moving across town or cross-country, newly relocated people spend an average of $7,300 at retail in the 3 months following their move.
